Kelly Henderson, Ph.D. | Executive Director, Formed Families Forward

A special educator by profession, Kelly is a former public school teacher of students with emotional and behavioral disorders, and has worked in national and federal special education policy and research settings. She holds a Ph.D. in Special Education and Behavior Disorders from University of Maryland, College Park. Kelly’s family is formed in part through public foster care and adoption. Her children have a range of learning, behavioral and cognitive disabilities for which they have received early intervention, special education and related services. Kelly also serves as part-time instructional faculty at George Mason University, training graduate students and special education teachers.